Exercise 1

We want to look at data for the Facebook, Apple, Amazon, Netflix, and Google (FAANG) stocks, but we were given each as a separate CSV file. Combine them into a single file and store the dataframe of the FAANG data as faang for the rest of the exercises:

1. Read each file in.
2. Add a column to each dataframe, called ticker, indicating the ticker symbol it is for (Apple's is AAPL, for example). This is how you look up a stock. Each file's name is also the ticker symbol, so be sure to capitalize it.
3. Append them together into a single dataframe.
4. Save the result in a CSV file called faang.csv.

In [3]: from IPython.core import application
import pandas as pd

1 Read each file
fb = pd.read_csv('fb.csv')
aapl = pd.read_csv('aapl.csv')
amzn = pd.read_csv('amzn.csv')
nflx = pd.read_csv('nflx.csv')
goog = pd.read_csv('goog.csv')
```

Exercise 2

With faang, use type conversion to change the date column into a datetime and the volume column into integers. Then, sort by date and ticker.

- Find the seven rows with the highest value for volume.
- Right now, the data is somewhere between long and wide format. Use `melt()` to make it completely long format. Hint: date and ticker are our ID variables (they uniquely identify each row). We need to melt the rest so that we don't have separate columns for open, high, low, close, and volume.

- Using web scraping, search for the list of the hospitals, their address and contact information. Save the list in a new csv file, hospitals.csv.
- Using the generated hospitals.csv, convert the csv file into pandas dataframe. Prepare the data using the necessary preprocessing techniques.

Excellence for Medical Travel

Since September 29, 2017

Cleveland Clinic | Ohio

Founded nearly a century ago, Cleveland Clinic has always lived at the leading edge of innovation, and has been serving medical travel patients since its first day of operation. It has pioneered many medical breakthroughs, including coronary artery bypass surgery and the first face transplant in the United States. No less important, Cleveland Clinic has also led the way in putting patients first to improve patient satisfaction. Cleveland Clinic was the first major academic medical center to make patient experience a strategic goal, appoint a Chief Experience Officer, and one of the first to establish an Office of Patient Experience.

Services for Medical Travelers:

Heart and Vascular (medical/surgical), Digestive Diseases (medical/surgical), Neurology and Neurosurgery, Pediatrics, Cancer, Urology/Nephrology and OB/GYN. Full List

Conclusion

In this activity, I learned how to collect and clean data from different sources using Python. By merging the FAANG stock CSV files, I practiced how to standardize data types and use the `melt()` function to reshape a table for better analysis. The web scraping exercise taught me that real-world data is often messy; I had to shift from scraping individual labels to using "container-based" scraping to keep the hospital names and contact details correctly aligned. Overall, these exercises showed me that proper data wrangling is essential to ensure that the information we analyze is accurate, organized, and reliable.
